ABSTRACT

A system and method of securely processing an electronic transaction in which an image and data associated with the transaction are separately processed and 1) a legally acceptable substitute record of the transaction may be recreated at any step in processing, 2) unauthorized access to the image, data and or substitute document is detectable, 3) quality assurance of the image and data is provided, and 4) participants in a network may create additional security for the transactions.